Project Manager m/f Pavillon / Semi-Permanent construction

The challenge

As a project manager, you are a consultant, ideas supplier, designer and construction manager for our national and international clients for the implementation of their large-scale projects.

- You advise your customers on the planning and design of pavilions and semi-permanent buildings and convince them with innovative concepts and constructions.
- You are responsible for the flawless, on-time and on-budget implementation of your projects and are the central contact point between the technical departments and your client and suppliers throughout the entire project.
- You supervise the projects on site and are responsible for the personal and timely delivery to your customers. This involves national and international travel as well as occasional project-related weekend work.
- You will look after the existing customer portfolio professionally and sustainably and acquire new customers.

Your profile

- You have a solid education as an architect or engineer (Master Degree) with further qualifications in business management.
- You have international experience in the management of pavilion and semi-permanent construction projects and can look back on several years of successful experience in the acquisition and support of customers.
- You are a skillful rhetorician and winning presenter and well-versed in purchasing and the preparation of calculations and controlling.
- A solution-oriented way of thinking, a high sense of responsibility, confident English and negotiating skills in German round off your profile perfectly.

Our offer

- Challenging international projects in an interesting industry in transition.
- An extremely broad range of tasks with a high level of independence and personal responsibility.
- A workplace in the countryside with a view of the Alps
